

AFRICA FILM SERIES

FALL 2023

Sponsored by the
Africana Studies
Program

A film series that explores a variety of contemporary and historical topics across Africa, including colonial history, politics, peoples, cultures, cuisine, economics, and geographic diversity, gender, Africa's engagement with globalization, and much more.

Why Attend

The purpose of this film series is to expose the Mercer community to facts and features of Africa. This engagement will foster greater awareness and understanding of the continent in general. Students will build geographic awareness and critical consciousness relating to Africa as well as oral communication skills in discussing and conversing about the continent. The goal is to help prepare Mercer students for living and working in an increasingly globalized world.

Who Can Attend

This cross-disciplinary learning experience is free and open to students in all colleges and disciplines. Faculty and staff are also welcome. It is open to all film lovers, anyone interested in learning about Africa and its significance to their identity, and anyone seeking a deeper understanding of the world in which we live.

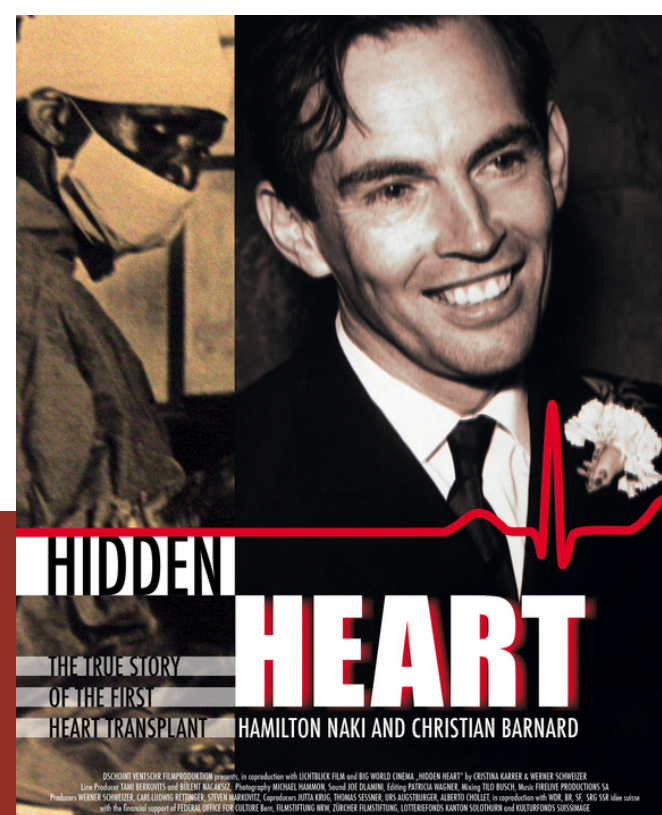

What to Expect

A variety of film genres will be featured spanning multiple time periods and countries. Films will be selected based on three categories (history, contemporary, & issue) each semester. Sessions are eligible for Continuing Education Credits (CEC) and extra credit.

History

September 20

Contemporary

October 18

Issue

November 8

Time: 6:30pm | STN 251

Host: Dr. Chinekwu Obidoa

Associate Professor of Global Health and Africana Studies

